trained on the laws of physics could eventually replace the numerical solvers that govern modern science and engineering. Huang's response, she recalled to Reuters, was unambiguous: "I want it to eat all their lunches." On Tuesday, Anandkumar and her co-founder Benedikt Jenik unveiled the system they have spent years building — one that their company, Accelerated Understanding Inc.,

That figure is not directly comparable to the context windows of large language models, and understanding why gets to the heart of what Accelerated Understanding is actually attempting. The company is not building a larger version of Claude or Gemini. It is building something architecturally different: a
